9. Discussion Items

President Will requested a roundtable discussion on the lessons learned from last year's hurricane events and items identified for future implementation.

Discussion ensued with comments made that many municipalities had issues with relocating collected debris, that providing pop-up permit review services were very helpful to residents, that municipalities seeking county assistance with debris collection was not possible because Pinellas County was also in the same position, that many experienced delays with obtaining the substantial damage letters, that debris collected from condominiums was classified commercial and would not be reimbursable in the future, that a resident volunteer program was a helpful resource for permits and other areas, and that many stormwater systems had pump and lift stations located below the flood level and not enough back-up generators. It was stated that future efforts would include: educating residents on the 50% rule, hiring temporary employees to make one-on-one contact with residents after the storm, implementing a text message platform to directly communicate with the community, having additional resources on standby to facilitate the recovery phase, working with FEMA to improve the valuation of structures prior to an incident, and training residents to be permit technicians.

In response to questions, Indian Shores Finance Director Amy Lockhart said the cost associated with waiving the permit fees related to hurricane damage repairs was absorbed through the fund balance in the building department. Treasure Island Mayor Doctor said the cost associated with waiving permit fees was absorbed via a loan through the general fund. St. Pete Beach Vice Mayor Marriott said the waiving of permit fees came out of reserves.

It was stated that Pinellas County will open their disaster recovery grant program in October; residents are encouraged to visit recover.pinellas.gov, or text "RECOVER" to 88877, for more information.

Belleair Shore Mayor Blume explained his municipality is experiencing a problem with sportfishing charter boats and shark fishing. He said he was seeking feedback from members regarding how their municipality addresses the issue.

Discussion ensued with comments made that it would be difficult to enforce past the swim zone and that the Town of Redington Shores has an ordinance addressing shark fishing and chumming.
